

RRG
Early
Life
File

Hand signals given by battery commander were orders that moved the horse artillery. Rolling briskly along a Wyoming trail, the outfit above was old Utah national guard battery arriving at Camp Otis, between Laramie and Cheyenne, Wyo., for 1910 maneuvers.

Canvas covered wagons made up the supply trains of national guard military units. Gun caissons were faster than the heavy-wheeled transports, but in 1914 when this picture was made in Salt Lake valley maneuvering guardsmen were never out of reach of supply trains.